Why We Take This Step

We have come to the conclusion that no progressive jeweler can handle all makes of watches and do justice to them all. So we have taken the El Paso agency for the watch that we consider the best—the Gruen Watch.

We will keep a complete stock of these watches—especially the Verithin models—the kind that “fits your pocket like a silver dollar.” We believe that by concentrating the Gruen Watch—the masterpiece of the watchmaker’s craft—that we will be in a position to render better service to our patrons both in selling them the most precise watch they can get and in caring for the watches after they are sold.

To make room for this complete Gruen line we must get rid of some of our other lines at once—regardless of price. Hence, this phenomenal discount sale, at prices unheard of in the annals of the jewelry trade.

Every watch will be marked with a special tag showing in plain figures unheard of prices for high grade watches. Don't delay. Come in at once.

FLOOD CREST WILL BE REACHED SOON

Cold Weather Stopped Colorado Thaw—Rise Now Is From New Mexico.

The crest of the flood waters approaching El Paso in the Rio Grande should arrive here sometime this evening, according to estimates based on reports received from United States reclamation officials. The crest passed Selden, N. M., at 4 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Selden is 50 miles from El Paso, but about 90 miles up stream as the river flows. After 4 o'clock a slight drop in the river at Selden was noticed, the waters continuing to recede Wednesday. The waters are going down at Elephant Butte dam site, 110 miles from El Paso.

As far as El Paso is concerned Wednesday morning's reading of the United States weather bureau gage at this point showed 15.3 feet, a rise of three-tenths of a foot in the preceding 24 hours. It is estimated that the crest will travel about four miles an hour, and traveling the 90 miles, from Selden, should reach El Paso within 24 hours from the time it passed Selden. This should bring the flood here sometime after 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon.

Until now it was believed by government officials that the flood due here was of Colorado waters. But this has been disproved, and it now certain that the fast approaching high waters are from New Mexico mountains. The Colorado waters are yet to come. Some days ago officials at Denver predicted high water at El Paso, but shortly after the prediction, a cold snap hindered the thaw on the highlands. Officials of the reclamation service at Antonio, Col., have wired here that there have been no floods in the Rio Grande basin there, and that the cold prevented the expected thaw. This makes it almost certain that the flood due in El Paso is of waters from New Mexico Mountains.

The crest, which passed Selden, N. M., Tuesday afternoon, registered 6000 second feet. This is not deemed a menacing flood, and while it may flood some lowlands about El Paso, it is not expected to compare with the flood of last spring. What the Colorado thaw may bring may not be speculated upon at this time.

TO SHOW DAM WORK IN MOTION PICTURES
Final Inspection of Power Plant at Dam to Be Made at Once.

Motion pictures of the Elephant Butte dam operations is the next thing on the official program. The workings of the huge irrigation project, calculated to rejuvenate the fertility of the El Paso valley, are quite as interesting from a spectacular standpoint as those of the Panama canal. Moving pictures are already issued of the dam operations at Reokuk, Iowa.

It is the publicity department of the United States reclamation service which proposes to give the public of all the country a chance to see the wheels go round down at the butt.

Walter Pack, of the Washington, D. C., office of the service, is now at Elephant Butte preparing to make some motion pictures of the operations. He is an expert motion picture machine operator.

Final Inspection of Plant.
The final inspection of the big power plant at the government dam will be made at once, preparatory to the turning over of the plant to the government. C. E. Hogie, assistant chief electrical engineer of the reclamation service, with headquarters at Los Angeles, arrived Tuesday night in El Paso, and departed Wednesday morning for the dam site. He will inspect the power plant, and if his recommendations are satisfactory, the plant will be turned over at once to the government by the contractors. The 36 day operation of the plant required by the contracts, has expired, and no hitch has been experienced in operation.
